TRANSPORT. UNITED KINGDOM

The Ipswich and Cambridge councils are searching partners to a Civitas Plus Project ("Air quality problems around the Waterfront").

The transport strategy seeks to address these problems and to cater for the expected growth in a more sustainable way.

We will introduce better management of scarce road space and control parking to improve air quality and bring about a step change in the levels of walking cycling and public transport use.

At the core of the proposal are two linked packages of integrated transport measures:

- There will be a sustainable transport package aimed at new residential and employment developments in the Waterfront and the Education Quarter. This will tackle transport growth at source.

- A second integrated package focused on the town centre will transform public transport and promote sustainable travel for work, business and leisure travel into central Ipswich.

The project will be take place over 7 years starting in 2008.
